Report of Second Ordinary General Meeting

(SIXTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING).

THE SECOND ORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of the EGYPT EXPLORATION FUND since its incorporation as a Society (its sixth since the foundation of the Fund in 1883) was held on Friday, April 12th, in the large room of the Zoological Society, 3 Hanover Square; the President, Sir John Fowler, K.C.M.G., in the Chair.

There were present: Professor Reginald Stuart Poole, LL.D., Vice-President of the Fund; Miss Amelia B. Edwards, LL.D., Vice-President and Honorary Secretary; H. A. Grueber, Esq., F.S.A., Honorary Treasurer; Hellier Gosselin, Esq., Secretary; the Hon. Henry White, American Chargé d'Affaires; Sir Charles Nicholson, Bart.; the Right Hon. George Cubitt, M.P.; R. N. Cust, Esq., LL.D.; E. Maunde Thompson, Esq., LL.D., Principal Librarian of the British Museum; Edward A. Bond, Esq., C.B.; Henry Howorth, Esq., M.P.; T. H. Bayliss, Esq., Q.C.; J. S. Cotton, Esq.; T. Farmer Hall, Esq.; &c., &c.

The following, who were unable to be present, sent letters and messages expressing regret at their unavoidable absence: Sir W. H. Gregory, K.C.M.G.; P. Le Page Renouf, Esq.; Professor Hayter Lewis; &c., &c.

The proceedings were opened by the PRESIDENT, who called upon the Secretary to read the list of Members of Committee who were retiring in rotation, and the list of Members recommended for re-election. The Rev. W. Mac Gregor, Local Hon. Secretary for Tamworth, and Miss M. L. Herbert, Local Hon. Secretary for the South-East Metropolitan District, were recommended for election as Members of Committee.

The PRESIDENT then declared the order of business (following the election of Members of Committee and other Officers) to be as follows:

1. Report of the Hon. Treasurer.
2. Report of the Hon. Secretary.
3. Report of Miss Barlow, Local Hon. Secretary for Bolton.
4. Votes of Donations of Antiquities to various Museums.

Mr. H. A. GRUBER, Hon. Treasurer, then submitted the Balance Sheet, and read his Financial Report.

FINANCIAL REPORT OF THE HONORARY TREASURER FOR 1887-8.

The Balance Sheet for 1887-8, which I have the honour to lay before the Council, marks another period of success in the annals of the Fund. This success, I need hardly say, is due to the continued exertions of your very able and active Honorary Secretary and Vice-President, Miss Edwards; to the zealous efforts of your Hon. Treasurer for America, the Rev. W. C. Winslow; and of the several Local Honorary Secretaries.

The Balance Sheet shows that the total expenditure for 1887-8 was £2341 19s. 11d., which is made up of the following items: (1) For M. Naville's excavations on the site of Bubastis and the City of Onias, and for part of the expenses connected with the transport to Alexandria of the objects found, £1564 13s. 1d.; (2) For Publications, viz. illustrating and packing Tanis I. and Naukratis I., printing Goshen and the third edition of Pithom, £295 18s. 2d.; (3) For packing, carriage, and mending antiquities, £118 14s. 9d.; (4) For books for the circulating library, £10; (5) For rent of office and Secretarial expenses, printing, stationery, postage, &c., £352 13s. 11d.

The total receipts for the corresponding period have been £2563 4s. 11d., the chief items of which are as follows: (1) By subscriptions, £2500 1s. 2d. These may be thus subdivided: Through Miss Edwards, £353 7s. 6d.; through the Special Transport Fund, which was entirely raised by Miss Edwards, £390 2s. 6d. (this has been increased since the 31st July by £100 2s., making a total of £492 4s. 6d.); through Professor Stuart Poole, the Local Honorary Secretaries,* and other sources, £556 11s. 2d.; through the Rev. W. C. Winslow, your Honorary Treasurer for America, £1100; and lastly, through the American Student Fund, per the Rev. W. C. Winslow, £100. (2) By the sale of Publications and Reports, £63 3s. 9d.

If we compare our financial position for 1886-7 and 1887-8, the following results will be seen:

The gross expenditure for 1886-7 was £1510 6s. 10d., as against £2341 19s. 11d. for 1887-8; and the gross receipts over the same periods were £1718 13s. 11d., as against £2563 4s. 11d.; the home receipts through subscriptions being, for 1887-8, £565 17s. 2d. in excess of those of the previous year, and those from America £340.

On the receipts from the sale of Publications there has been a falling-off during 1887-8, as compared with the previous year, of £47 os. 9d.; but since the 31st July this lost ground has been more than recovered, ■ Miss Edwards alone has sold memoirs of the Fund to the amount of £102 7s. 6d., and the Balance Sheet shows that on the

* See the List of Receipts through Local Hon. Secretaries, pp.

31st July Messrs. Trübner were indebted to the Fund in the sum of £82 1s. 10d.

As regards our available assets at the close of the two periods—on 31st July, 1887, our cash balance was £2310 16s. 2d.; but at the same date in 1888 it was £2532 1s. 2d.

Since the accounts were closed at the end of the financial year, the expenses of the Fund have been very considerable. During this period some heavy accounts have been paid for printing, illustrating, and binding Tanis II. and Naukratis II., and the third edition of Pithom, &c., amounting in all to £540 4s. 4d. The sum of £600 has been paid to the account of M. Naville at Messrs. Cook and Sons, Cairo, in order that he might complete his excavations at Bubastis; and the transport of the objects found during the last season's operations has proved a much more expensive undertaking than was, or could reasonably have been, anticipated, unexpected difficulties having arisen through the lowness of the Nile, and also in getting the objects shipped from Alexandria to England. The transport expenses from Bubastis to Alexandria amounted altogether to £935 10s. 6d.; from Alexandria to London, about £439 10s. 9d.; and from Liverpool to Australia, America, and Geneva, £112 9s. 6d. There still remains to be paid the freight of the objects to other destinations. The result is, that on the 11th of April last, our balance at the Bank was reduced to £1282 5s. 5d.

I regret very much to have to give so unfavourable a report of our present financial position; and I must add that, had it not been for the foresight of Miss Edwards in raising the Transport Fund last year, and also for the results of her recent Lectures at Birmingham, Manchester, Nottingham, Liverpool, Edinburgh, and other places in England and Scotland, which have added at least sixty new Subscribers to our list, our position would have been still more precarious.

I have ventured to lay these details before the meeting, in order that I may draw the attention of the supporters of the Fund to the fact that at the present moment, more than at any previous period of the Fund's history, their generous aid is necessary for the carrying out of the great work which it has undertaken, and which, up to the present time, it has performed with such marked success.

MISS AMELIA B. EDWARDS, as Honorary Secretary of the Fund, next read her own Report.

REPORT OF THE HONORARY SECRETARY.

SIR JOHN FOWLER, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—It is the accustomed duty of your Honorary Secretary to report the discoveries of the past season, and to lay before you the plan of our ensuing campaign. To-day, however, I find myself compelled to depart from my usual programme; for, at the Special Meeting held in this room last May, the season's work was already over; and I not only forestalled the Report which I ought to read this afternoon, but I placed the results of the exploration before you in a series of photographic views shown by the oxy-hydrogen lantern. Another exploration season has, moreover, come and gone since that evening; and so, having on that occasion forestalled my Report for 1888, I am now obliged to forestall the Report for 1889, which, in due course, should be presented to you at our next Annual General Meeting. It will not take me very long to perform that duty. All, or nearly all, that the ruins of the Great Temple of Bubastis had to yield in the way of architecture and sculpture was laid bare in the course of the two preceding . The disjecta membra of a whole temple, and that a temple of the first magnitude, including an extraordinary profusion of statues of all sizes, of all materials, of all periods, were found en masse, and buried literally in one grave; leaving little or nothing to be discovered this year.

And yet this year's work has been far from unimportant. A task well begun required to be as well ended; and to clear up the site was as necessary a part of M. Naville's work as to open it. What he began in 1887, and carried on in 1888, he has finished, and finished thoroughly, in 1889. He has literally left no stone unturned in that vast area strewn with the ruins of courtyards, halls, and sanctuaries. In the search for inscriptions, every block has been lifted and rolled. Every bas-relief has been reproduced in paper casts. Every inscription has been copied. Nothing, in short, has been left for a future investigator to discover.

It is a source of great satisfaction to M. Naville, and to ourselves, that this necessary, though somewhat uninteresting, task has been performed; notwithstanding that the results have been negative rather than positive.

The only large work of art found this year is a colossal group of two figures in red granite.

The inscriptions are more important. Part of a large black granite tablet in praise of Rameses II. has been found. Also an inscription of Usertesen I., showing that the first temple built upon this site—the Temple of the Ancient Empire—was yet standing during the early part of the XIIth Dynasty. But there have also been found two much more interesting records. You will perhaps remember that the earliest royal name which had been discovered when we last met in this room was that of Pepi-Merira of the VIth Dynasty, one of the last of the pyramid builders of the Sakkarah necropolis, who is supposed to have lived about 3800 years before our era. But about three weeks ago, when turning some massive blocks which had not been turned last year, M. Naville discovered two fresh inscriptions, which carry back the date of the Great Temple of Bast to a point some 600 years earlier still. One of these contains the so-called "banner-name" of Khufu, and the other the throne-name of Khafra—Khufu, the builder of the Great Pyramid, and Khafra the builder of the Second Pyramid. I need not point out to you that these are facts of great importance. They apparently complete the history of this splendid building, and show it to have been in existence from the time of Khufu to the time of Ptolemy Euergetes the Second—that is to say, for a period of over 4000 years.

The number of royal names discovered in the ruins amounts now to twenty-six. This total represents probably not one-twentieth part of those kings who at one time and another contributed to the magnificence of the structure. Unfortunately, however, the Pharaohs were no less eager to efface the memory of their predecessors than to record their own glory. M. Naville tells a melancholy tale of erased inscriptions:

"I have found no moderately long inscription of Rameses II.," he wrote in his last report, "which is not sculptured over an erasure." What we have lost by those erasures, who shall say?

Before leaving Tell Basta, M. Naville, at the express request of the Committee, made a tentative excavation in a spot near the site of the Great Temple, which has long been identified with the temple of Thoth, described by Herodotus as "the Temple of Hermes, at the end of the street of Hermes, leading from the Great Temple of Bast." The line of the street and the mound of the temple ■■■ clearly traceable, and are laid down in Wilkinson's plan, in the second volume of his translation of Herodotus. I will read you what M. Naville writes of this matter in his last letter, dated March 31st:

"I ended by an excavation in the temple called by Herodotus the Temple of Hermes. I had some difficulty in persuading the farmer to whom the clover-field belonged to allow me to dig; but with the help of £10 I succeeded. The result was a few blocks, all bearing the name of Osorkon II., except ■■■ architrave inscribed by Rameses II. The inscriptions are all fragmentary, except one large stela, and all refer to donations of gold, silver, and precious stones given by the king to various temples."

So much for what has been done this year. What will be done next year, we cannot at present foretell. We hope, however, to obtain the necessary authority to attack some new and not less valuable site than that which has yielded such magnificent results at Tell Basta.

With regard to home news, I am anxious to add one or two facts to those just placed before you in the report of your Hon. Treasurer, which, ■ an official document, covers only the official year ending with July 31st, 1888. I, however, may venture to tell you, unofficially, that since we met in May—a period of eleven months—two hundred new European subscribers have joined the Society, and probably double that number in America; but on this point we have as yet no details. We have also eleven new Local Hon. Secretaries, thus raising our staff of local representatives to a total of thirty-seven. All are doing excellent work, and by means of lectures, articles in local newspapers, and private influence, are spreading the reputation of our Society, and adding solidly to ■ resources.

The PRESIDENT next invited Miss EDWARDS to give some account of the sculptures just arrived in this country from the site of the Great Temple of Bubastis.

Miss EDWARDS said that she had been requested by the Committee to inspect and report upon the monuments which had been ceded to the Society by the Egyptian Government, and that she accordingly went to Liverpool ■ March 13th, where the monuments had just been disembarked from the hold of the steamship Marsotis, from Alexandria. On arriving at the docks, Miss Edwards found twenty-seven large packing-cases in Messrs. Moss's shed, and ten colossal objects, without cases, lying on the open quay—namely, part of the shaft of a red granite column, polished, and inscribed with large and deeply-cut hieroglyphs; a magnificent "lotus-bud" capital in two pieces, each from 12 ft. to 14 ft. in length, and about 5 ft. in diameter; a colossal torso of a king in red granite, of archaic style; three large fragments of a red granite shrine, exquisitely sculptured in very low relief, and bearing the cartouches of Nectanebo I.; while, towering above all the rest, rose the [redacted] black granite trunk, legs, and throne of the colossal statue of Apepi, last and greatest of the Hyksôs kings. Miss Edwards then learned that, the captain of the Mareotis having declined to take more than a certain number of cases [redacted] board, these ten fragments had been unpacked at Alexandria, and bedded in a cargo of beans in the hold of the steamer. In [redacted] enormous case, also on the open quay, [redacted] a great Hathor-head capital in red granite from the Hypostyle Hall of the temple, which could only be seen by standing on a scaffolding and looking down the inner side of the case. The effect of this beautiful face, [redacted] from above, was most extraordinary. It measured some [redacted] feet from chin to brow, and [redacted] literally without flaw or scratch. Very fine also was a large red granite slab carved in low relief with full-length portraits of Osorkon II. and his wife, Queen Karoama. Passing from the quay to the shed, Miss Edwards examined the contents of the whole of the cases. She was amazed at the number, size, variety and splendour of their contents, which represented, not a selection, but a museum of ancient Egyptian sculpture. Here were four more pieces of the hieroglyphed column on the quay, which, when erected, will have palm-capital, shaft and base complete; another fine slab from the festival hall of Osorkon II.; another archaic torso in red granite, the counterpart of the one on the quay (these were evidently the upper halves of two statues which originally had been placed on either side of a doorway) [redacted] fine black granite statue of heroic size, in two pieces, representing Rameses II. enthroned; another block of the shrine of Nectanebo I.; a black granite statue of Bast, the tutelary goddess of the temple; seven cases of limestone blocks carved in bas-relief, from a temple dedicated to Hathor by Ptolemy Soter, at Terraneh, in the Western Delta; and most valuable of all, a ■■■■ containing the black granite head of the before-mentioned colossal statue of a Hyksôs king. This head so closely resembles the heads of the Hyksôs andro-sphinxes of Tanis, which Mariette ascribes to Apepi, that M. Naville believes it may probably represent that king. Unfortunately, the original inscription has been erased from the front of the throne on which the statue sits, in order to substitute the name and titles of Rameses II. Miss Edwards described this head as a masterpiece of ancient art, instinct with individuality, and displaying in ■■■■ marked degree the ethnic characteristics of the Mongolian race. Miss Edwards then went on to say that, in consequence of the enormous expense already incurred, it had been deemed advisable to despatch direct from Liverpool such objects ■■■■ were destined for re-shipment, in order to avoid the cost of sending them to London. It had therefore devolved upon her to make the selections for America, Australia, Liverpool, and Manchester. This was a very anxious task, which she had discharged to the best of her judgment by sending to the United States monuments especially representative of the fine arts of ancient Egypt, and by reserving for the British Museum those of a more strictly historical character. Knowing that many of the subscribers had wished to see the great "lotus bud" capital in the British Museum, Miss Edwards felt somewhat alarmed at having to tell them that she had ventured to send that piece to the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, and had reserved instead for the British Museum the inscribed column with the palm capital. The British Museum, however, had long possessed a small, but very perfect, "lotus-bud" column complete, in black granite, whereas the national collection possessed no specimen of the "palm" order. The great Hathor capital was long since promised to the American subscribers; and ■■■■ rows of square pillars surmounted by these Hathor capitals were used in the Hypostyle Hall in alternation with rows of round columns surmounted by "lotus-bud" capitals, the ■■■ was historically the complement of the other. It was therefore necessary to send both together. In conclusion, Miss Edwards observed that if the Society had incurred ■■■ extraordinary expense in the exploration of this temple and the transport of monuments, they had been rewarded by a very liberal share of the sculptures discovered.

The PRESIDENT next invited Miss ANNIE E. F. BARLOW to read her report upon a visit which she had recently paid to Pithom, Tanis, Tell Nebesheb, Tell Defenneh, and Tell-el-Yahoudieh, sites excavated by the Fund since its foundation in 1883.

Miss ANNIE E. F. BARLOW, Local Honorary Secretary for Bolton, Lancashire, then read her Report.

MISS ANNIE E. F. BARLOW'S REPORT.

I had for ■■■ long talked and written about the sites excavated by the Fund, that I began to feel like one of my friends who said, "I have praised Emerson for years; I really must begin to read him." So, when my brother and I went to Egypt in February, we were determined to see some of these sites for ourselves.

It all looked very easy. We had spread out the large map a hundred times, and thereon found our way to Pithom and Tanis, Tell Defenneh and Naukratis. But there are slight practical difficulties. At Tell-el-Yahoudieh, for instance, several miles on a bony donkey, which is used only to cotton-bales, and has never seen a side-saddle before, can hardly be called an ideal journey. Still, you get accustomed to it; and if the saddle does slip round ■■■ every rough bit of road, you become more dexterous every time, and learn by instinct when to jump off. And a barley field is very soft to fall on.

The road to Tell-el-Yahoudieh lies through the fertile Delta-fields covered with crops of grain and beans, and as we quietly donkeyed along, the faint intoxicating scent of the bean-flowers kept coming to us in almost imperceptible wafts of fragrance. It was a delightful little journey—delightful with that sort of charm you feel off the beaten track, when you can see the simple, natural life of the people as they really live it.

The mounds have been terribly pulled about; and the sebâkh diggers are even now going to and fro with their baskets, and carrying off the dust and mud-bricks for manure; so that it is very hard to trace any plan in the place. The east end is the highest: and there we saw a typical cutting in the side of the mound. A layer of crude brick showed at the top; then a line of charcoal told of some conflagration; lower came a stratum of charred bones; then some pottery; and lastly, crude brick again.

But the Jewish Cemetery was what we were most anxious to find; and, pushing across the plain for about two miles, we came to the rock-cut tombs we were looking for. They lie just out of the reach of the inundation, on slightly rising ground. Going down five or six steep steps and under a low doorway, a chamber is entered in which one can hardly stand upright. All round the chamber long narrow holes open out, which cannot be called either niches or recesses. They would just hold a coffin pushed in feet or head foremost. There is no sign of any inscription, nor of the pillow-bricks characteristic of Jewish interments; but M. Naville told us that they had all been taken away. There were other tombs about a mile further on, but nothing remains to be seen in them.

Pithom was harder to manage. We knew the way perfectly on the map; but the old station Ramsés is no more, and if it had not been for Artin Pasha's thoughtful kindness, we could never have reached the mound. We carried out a complicated and fatiguing plan. Leaving Cairo at six in the evening, ■ spent the night in ■ luggage train, ■ slow and jolting mode of conveyance, which landed us at our nearest point — Nefisheh — about five in the morning. Then donkeys—two ill-favoured beasts, with that indescribable jog which soon reduces you to a pulp—took us to Tell-el-Maskhutah, three hours distant, by the side of the canal. Here are two or three houses, and in one of them we were forced to take shelter; for a Khamseen wind came on just as we arrived, and the air ■ thick with brown dust. Out of doors, it drenched and blinded us, like rain: inside, we could hardly see. It was ■ terrible storm: the worst for twenty-one years, as we were afterwards told in Alexandria. But I remembered my subscribers, and took courage. A Khamseen is bad, but begging is worse. When the storm seemed to have abated a little, we crawled out to try to find the store-chambers; and they ■ easy to trace. The sand is fast filling them up, but there is still a good deal to be seen; and it was delightful to make out the lines of mortar for oneself, and to find portions of plaster still sticking to the bricks. We tried hard to get ■ good brick; but they crumble terribly, and every fresh attempt brought showers of sand and dust into our eyes.

About half a mile further off lies the Roman town, and one of us went out to it; but you can see very little there, except a few coins and shells lying on the ground.

The Zagazig express was to stop for us somewhere near the old Ramsés station. To reach this, a rather perilous voyage ■■■ the canal ■■ accomplished ■ a raft made of two barrels with a door on the top. I think it is worked on the flying bridge principle, current and rope being supposed to drift one across in a diagonal direction to the other side. But the violent wind drove ■ down the stream and left us near the middle in a bed of reeds, with ■ rope all paid out, and no fate before us (as ■ thought) but to wade ashore.

From this alarming experience, or perhaps a watery grave, we were rescued, however, by an heroic donkey-boy, who swam across and towed us in.

We did Tanis the next day from Faku. A disused cotton-boat, gay with a yellow awning and the richest of old Eastern rugs, took us down the canal to Nebesheh—a charming little journey; for the canal — like — of — inland rivers, with its reedy banks where wild-fowl build, and its woods of palms and lebbekhs along the edge. The crew dragged us, taking it in turns, while the captain lay at the stern and called out encouragement. And as we glided along between the pleasant banks in the early sunshine, friendly little land-birds — out and looked at us; and larks and wagtails ran beside us; and, now and then, the dainty bee-eater would rise from among the rushes, or the pied kingfisher dart fearlessly into the water in front of our prow.

To see Tell Nebesheh was an uncovenanted mercy. Here we were to leave our boat and go across to Tanis on horseback; but we had not known that we should pass it till we started. We made out the plan from Mr. Petrie's memoir,* and found the remains of the shrine of which he gives a picture. We also walked round the enormous cemetery; but beyond these there is very little to see.

Here our most fascinating experience began. We had been taking some photographs, when two magnificent Bedouins joined us. (The Sheykhs of Nebesheh and Tanis were with us already.) They might have been kings of the East or dukes of Edom. Standing at least six foot three, clad in spotlessly clean cream-coloured garments flying in the wind, they leaned on their guns and bent their heads towards us with such gentle grace and dignity as — never expects to see again, and made a picture — to be forgotten. At the wish of one of them, we took a photograph of his tent. It was a striking and beautiful sight. The rich brown and black of the camel's-hair covering stood out against the vivid blue sky; the horse, with bright saddle-cloth and elaborate trappings, was tethered in front; inside, everything was delightfully clean (you feel the force of this after the Arab houses), and the most gorgeous rugs and carpets, with that curious indescribable Eastern sheen, were lying on the ground. But the greatest treasure was their falcon, jessed and hooded, standing inside on its perch, with its master's glove fastened below.

All across the great plain they rode with us, showing off the tricks of their beautiful horses. "He is yours, if you will have him," said one, when we praised the gentle, graceful creature, who would lie down when bidden, or fly like the wind and be out of sight in a moment.

But they hardly disturbed the impression of that boundless plain; for they only seemed to cut us off from all sense of reality, and to shut us in to the impression of the wonderful ruins we were approaching. Over the great expanse of sky, the rain-clouds were quickly chasing each other. Before us stretched the vast plain, with hardly a tree in sight, except the stunted dwarf shrubs of tamarisk here and there; while far away, islanded now and then by the flickering mirage, the red mounds rose high above the plain. It was inexpressibly still, for only once or twice a wild bird flew above our heads with a shrill cry.

We first saw the mounds, with the hollow into which all the riches of the temple are emptied out—tumbled down before you in that valley between the cliffs of mud—in the violet Egyptian sunset which seemed to make the fallen stones grow larger every moment. We spent the night in tents, while every animal in the village cried aloud with a hundred voices. The camels gurgled, and dogs—perhaps jackals—cried and bayed, while a donkey (harmless enough in daylight) hee-hawed twenty times running, at intervals.

Next morning, armed with Mr. Petrie's memoir, we went all over the temple area. One could never have realised the grandeur of the place unless one had slowly clambered among those rich sculptures, and tried to rebuild the place for oneself with all its sphinxes and obelisks and colossi. It was like a great object lesson received under the most fortunate conditions, or like a concrete piece of illustrated history.

The cotton-boat took us home in the evening under a full moon, and with the swinging light of a lamp at the stern. And I shall never forget the stillness, and the gentle swish of the water as we slipped through it so quietly, while the boatmen, crouching on the rugs, sang in a melancholy monotone: "Seven moons have I watched for thee, O faithless one: hast thou forsaken me?"

I have not said a word about Tell Basta, though two of our happiest days were spent there, because I was sure that Miss Edwards's Report would tell you how that work had gone on. If, therefore, I do not speak of the kindness we received from M. Naville and the other explorers who were with him, it is not because we were ungrateful.

Professor STUART POOLE, in proposing a vote of thanks to Miss Barlow, expressed his sense of the zeal by which she was actuated in visiting these sites, most of which lie far from the beaten track and are difficult of access. The success with which Miss Barlow had worked in her district, and the extent to which she had interested others in the cause of the Egypt Exploration Fund, might be seen by reference to the Annual Reports issued by the Society. Mr. Poole remarked that Miss Barlow had had a highly interesting experience in her journey to Tanis. She had not only seen the magnificent ruins of that venerable Temple, but she appeared to have made the acquaintance of the Patriarch Abraham himself, who, as we all know, entertained angels unawares.

The vote was seconded by Miss EDWARDS, who was then called upon by the President to read the list of donations destined for the British Museum, namely:

1. A fine column of the Egyptian "palm order," in polished red granite, with palm-capital, shaft, and base complete—the shaft inscribed with hieroglyphic characters.

2. The upper half of a colossal statue of a king in red granite—archaic style.

3. Three large fragments of a shrine in polished red granite, beautifully sculptured in very low relief; period of Nectanebo I. (XXXth Dynasty).

4. A large slab of red granite carved in bas-relief with portrait figures of King Osorkon II. and his wife, Queen Karoama (XXIInd Dynasty).

5. A colossal statue in polished black granite of the celebrated Hyksôs King, Apepi, in four pieces—the finest piece of Egyptian portrait sculpture known.

The Right Hon. GEORGE CURTIS, M.P., being requested to propose the grant, expressed his regret that it was not found possible to exhibit the objects in London, that they might have been seen all together, ■ they were seen by Miss Edwards at Liverpool; but he quite admitted that the additional expense would have been unjustifiable. It was ■ great gratification to know that a selection of monuments of priceless value would find their way to the British Museum, where, he had ■ doubt, they would be received with as much pleasure ■ it gave the Society to offer them. He congratulated the Society upon the way in which the large ■■■ of £2500 had been spent, since it ■■■ assuredly money well laid out. The discoveries at Tell Basta had thrown an unexpected light on ancient history, and he need now only congratulate those who had taken so large a part in the work, and conducted it with ■ much energy, foresight, and skill.

Mr. R. N. CURT, Hon. Secretary of the Royal Asiatic Society, seconded the resolution.

Mr. E. MAUNDE THOMPSON, Principal Librarian of the British Museum, returned thanks on behalf of the trustees for this great donation, which had already arrived at the Museum, and was deposited in the portico, awaiting formal entry. The objects were sent there previous to presentation, it being no easy matter to move thirty tons of granite. He confessed that when he found thirty tons weight of objects addressed to himself, he was somewhat overwhelmed; but on seeing the contents of the cases, he appreciated what his predecessors must have felt when, in the early part of the present century, the British army in Egypt captured most of the larger objects now shown in the great Egyptian Gallery. The time was, however, past when monuments were taken at the point of the sword; happily on the present day they were taken at the edge of the spade, which was far more satisfactory. Mr. Maunde Thompson regretted that his friend and colleague, Mr. Le Page Renouf, Keeper of the Department of Oriental Antiquities, was unable to be present, as he (Mr. Maunde Thompson) was not qualified to speak with due knowledge of the beauty and value of the donation. He could not, however, forbear to express his admiration of the statue of Apepi, of the fine bas-relief of Osorkon and Karoama, and of the very delicate and beautiful execution of the shrine of Nectanebo I. These very interesting antiquities would be placed as nearly as possible in proper chronological order, and everything would be done to put the statue of Apepi together in the best manner. How the kings of other dynasties would approve of a Hyksos invader again coming among them could not, however, be foreseen. It was the duty of the keepers to guard the sculptures by day; but it was impossible to say what they might do at night, when left to themselves, or to what extent Thothis III. and Rameses the Great might wreak their vengeance on the detested Apepi.

The President, speaking as a practical engineer, assured Mr. Maunde Thompson that there was no difficulty whatever in moving thirty tons of granite; the real difficulty would be to reproduce monuments of such size and beauty, and this he was compelled to admit would be quite impossible ■ the present day. He then invited the Members and Subscribers, and all present, to meet on the 16th instant, at three p.m., under the Colonnade of the British Museum, to inspect the sculptures, and he trusted that Miss Edwards and Professor Stuart Poole would be there to meet them.

The HON. SECRETARY then read the proposed grant to the city of Geneva of a statue of Rameses II., enthroned, of heroic size, in polished black granite; also to the University of Sydney, New South Wales, of the capital of ■ red granite column, sculptured on two sides with a colossal head of the goddess Hathor.

These donations were moved by Prof. STUART POOLE, who reminded his hearers that the Museum of the University of Sydney was founded by Sir Charles Nicholson, then Chairman of the Senate, who gave to that institution his own choice collection formed by himself in Egypt. At Sydney, the Fund had supporters of large means and great generosity. It was therefore only right that the Society should do something for Sydney, seeing that Sydney had done so much for the Society. In giving to Geneva this fine statue of Rameses the Great, it was to be remembered that Geneva and the illustrious Swiss nation had given to the Fund M. Naville, an Egyptologist of the first rank, and the discoverer of the grandest monuments ever excavated ■ the expense of the Society.

The resolution was seconded by Mr. HENRY HOWORTH, M.P., who wished to say that there were two works which he should like to ■ undertaken by the Fund—works which he deemed essential to the great ■ in hand: (1) To bring pressure to bear upon the Government in every possible way, in order to have the existing monuments of Egypt properly protected; it having been ■ perpetual scandal during our occupation of that country that the monuments were being destroyed more rapidly than ever. (2) That the Fund should undertake to copy as many monumental inscriptions ■ possible throughout the country; such inscriptions being in course of rapid disappearance. Such a work would be a Corpus Inscriptionum of the highest value. Scientifically speaking, this would be as great a work as any excavation which could be proposed. Many persons were of opinion that the monuments discovered should remain in situ. But in Egypt, sculptures when uncovered were doomed to certain destruction at the hands of the Arab and the traveller, and were never safe until placed within the walls of a museum. He was very glad that some of the best of the monuments discovered at Tell Basta should be sent to the United States of America, where there were many thousands of students who have no opportunity of going to Egypt and seeing such objects face to face.

Sir CHARLES NICHOLSON, in returning thanks for the University of Sydney, remarked that when he travelled in Egypt some thirty-three years ago, the facilities for study, and for the acquisition of objects of antiquity, were much greater than at present. Among other interesting relics, he obtained fragments of a monument of Khuenaten from the neighbourhood of Memphis, where, as he believed, more evidences of the disk-worshippers had recently been found. He was fortunate in having made this collection, as he was thereby enabled to present it to the University of Sydney—an institution in the establishment of which he had borne a considerable share. He entirely agreed with the observations made by Mr. Howorth with regard to the destructive treatment which the monuments receive from travellers in Egypt; and he remembered seeing the walls of one of the most beautiful of the painted tombs of Ghizeh disfigured by an inscription in large black letters, announcing the fact that "Tom Smith gained the first agricultural prize at Wolverhampton in 1850."

The PRESIDENT next invited Miss EDWARDS to propose the donation to the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, U.S.A.

Miss EDWARDS, in proposing the donation to the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, U.S.A., observed that this was one of the pleasantest duties she had annually to perform in connection with the Egypt Exploration Fund. The gratitude of the Society to their American supporters found its expression in these donations; and she might say with truth that they had ■■■■ before given utterance to their goodwill in terms so weighty. The objects to be presented from Bubastis were: (1) The colossal Hathor-head capital in red granite; (2) The upper half of a colossal statue of a king in red granite, the companion to which had just been voted to the British Museum; (3) A colossal lotus-bud capital, in two pieces, from the Hypostyle Hall of the temple; (4) A red granite slab in bas-relief from the Festival Hall of Osorkon II., representing Amen enthroned, and a procession of worshippers advancing in attitudes of adoration. All the foregoing were from the ruins of the Great Temple of Bubastis. Also, from the site of a temple to Hathor founded by Ptolemy Soter at Terraneh (the ancient Termuthis), two very interesting bas-relief slabs in limestone. The remains of this temple were discovered and excavated by Mr. F. Llewellyn Griffith in 1888. The Fund was thus offering ■■■■ America specimens of the art of the Great Temple of Bubastis, dating from the time of the IVth Dynasty, 4000 B.C. down to the time of the XXIIInd Dynasty, circa B.C. 960, including a noble example of XIIth Dynasty work in the monster lotus-bud capital. The sculptures from Terraneh, on the other hand, represented the art of the Ptolemaic period under its most engaging aspect, and were especially interesting from the fact that very few works of the reign of Ptolemy Soter were known. In asking the members present to vote this donation, Miss Edwards reminded them that America had contributed no less than £1200 towards the excavation of the great historic site which had yielded such an extraordinary wealth of colossal objects. Miss Edwards concluded with a cordial reference to the great services of Dr. Winslow, their Vice-President and Honorary Treasurer for America, to whom the Society was deeply indebted for the zeal with which he had popularised the work of the Fund in the United States, and to whom his fellow-countrymen were no less indebted for the interest which he had induced them to take in a delightful study, as well as for the splendid monuments with which, through his exertions, the Boston collection has been enriched.

Professor STUART POOL, in seconding this resolution, pointed out how the American subscription was given in trust and entirely without conditions. It was therefore impossible for the Society to do less than give them of the best which they had to give. The finest historical object (i.e. the statue of Apepi) had been voted to the British Museum, and the finest artistic object (i.e. the great Hathor head) to the Museum of Fine Arts at Boston; thus making them equal. The Committee felt that what Miss Edwards had done was thoroughly right, and for all that had been done, she had their sanction and support.

The Hon. HENRY WHITE, American Chargé d'Affaires, said that he had great pleasure in accepting this valuable and important donation—the most important which had yet been sent to the United States. There was certainly no country in the world in which people were more interested in matters which bore upon Bible history; and there was no country in which people contributed more liberally to such enterprises as those conducted by the Egypt Exploration Fund. The Americans were naturally interested in a special degree in the work of the Fund, and he should have been sorry had his fellow-countrymen been behindhand in supporting it. It gave him great pleasure to hear that Miss Edwards was about to visit America, and that she had received an invitation signed by the Vice-President of the United States, and by a large number of eminent men connected with the churches, colleges, and learned societies of America. It did not, however, need any such formal document to assure Miss Edwards of the cordial welcome she would receive on the other side of the Atlantic.

Warned by the lateness of the hour, the PRESIDENT said that, in order to shorten their programme, he would himself propose the donations to Manchester, Liverpool, Bristol, and other provincial museums. The subscriptions from those places, and the donations they had given to the Special Transport Fund, were very liberal, and he was sure that all present would with great pleasure agree in voting the following gifts:—

1.—To the Museum of Liverpool:

A colossal portrait head of Rameses II. in red granite (XIXth Dynasty), with a bas-relief sculpture of Osorkon II. (XXIInd Dynasty) on the back.

2.—To the Owens College Museum, Manchester:

A colossal portrait head of Rameses II. in red granite.

3.—To the Museum of Bristol:

A colossal head of Osiris with the Atef crown, in red granite; also a limestone bas-relief slab from the Temple of Ptolemy Soter at Terraneh.

4.—To the Museum of Tamworth:

A black-granite statue of the goddess Bast, lioness-headed, heroic size.

5.—To the Museum of Bolton, Lancashire:

Three limestone slabs, with bas-relief subject of the goddess Hathor, from the Temple of Ptolemy Soter at Terraneh.

6.—To the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford:

A limestone slab with a bas-relief subject containing two portrait figures of Ptolemy Soter, from the Temple of Ptolemy Soter at Terraneh.

The resolution was carried by acclamation.

Professor STUART POOLE then proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman for the admirable way in which he had conducted the business of the meeting.

Mr. BOND, late Principal Librarian of the British Museum, considered it a great honour to second this resolution, and to be permitted to express his high sense of the zeal and enthusiasm which distinguished Sir John Fowler in his discharge of the duties of President of this Society. The success of the Fund depended on the enthusiasm of those who conducted its operations, and that success tended to benefit all nations and all civilisations. He especially congratulated the President and the Society on their harmonious relations with other countries.

The PRESIDENT expressed his acknowledgments, and the Meeting terminated.
